A STORY SHOWING THAT BLAST-ING POWDER AND LIGHTED PIPES WON'T MIX.

[From the Reese River Reveille.] A festive youth, who performs his daily avocations in the mines of Lander Hill, thought he would take home a little blasting powder the other day; it might come handy to split an obstinate log he had at home. When he started for his humble cabin in the evening, he wrapped a few comess carefully in several thick. humble cabin in the evening, he wrapped a few ounces carefully in several thicknesses of paper and placed it in his pocket. When he got home he got to thinking about how long it would be before he was likely to get a crushing; and then he thought what a nice perfume that handkerchief extract that he bought last Saturday night had, and he said within himself that a miner's life was hard and uncertain. Then he thought he ought to call on Smithers' girl to-night. He thought of everything but that powder in the pocket of his coat.

After supper he concluded to drop in and see that Smithers girl. He got his necktie in proper shape, his handkerchief was perfumed like unto a new blown rose; one ciled lock hung gracefully down chief was perfumed like unto a new blown rose; one cited lock hung gracefully down on his forchead, and he started for the domicile of his sweethess. This young man is coloring a mearschaum, but his girl detests the horrid smoke; so when he got to the door he knocked the bowl of the mearschaum on his mark beautiful mearschaum on his mark beautiful. the meerschaum on his manly heel, and put it into his pocket. Of course he didn't intend to put it in the same pocket with the powder. His affinity met him at the door with a sweet smile on her beaut-ous countenance, welcomed him to her paternal mansion, and invited him to the paternal did not be to be the paternal of the second countenance.

into the parlor and to a seat on the sofa.

They were engaged in conversation.

He asked her if it wasn't a beautiful evening, and then she inquired how he liked the dress Miss Brown wore at church last Sanday. He said he didn't like it a bit, and she remarked that Miss B. was a strek-no there are the church last Sanday. like it a bit, and she remarked that Miss B, was a stuck-up thing anyhow; and all this time that pipe was insidiously burning its way through the paper. He agreed that Miss Brown was somewhat stock up, and said maybe we'd strike it pretty soon and then you'd see who would wear plug hats. She told him she thought plug hats so becoming, and then he was going to tell her he adored her, that she was the darling of his send and that she was the darling of his soul, and that all his happiness was centered in her No. 7 boots, but he was interrupted. He arose from the floor and inquired if the lightning had struck anybody else, and remarked something about the Virginia explosion being a warning to peo-ple not to keep nitro-glycerine in their houses. Then he took off his coat. He said it was an old coat, and he didn't said it was an old coat, and he didn't want it no how. His girl's father suggested that this wasn't Fourth of July, and it he wanted to set off fireworks he ought to go up on the hill and do it. Then the young man said it was getting late, and he guessed he'd go home, and suggested that he would send a man around to-morrow to fix the sofa. He says now that flaxseed ain't worth a cuss for a poullice, and he ain't going to call on that Smithers gal any more; she's on that Smithers gal any more; she's most too high toned, and thinks herself too good for a miner anyhow.

SAULT ON A STREET PREACHER. - John L. Hopkins, the prophet of a new dis-pensation, who teaches the ultimate and final descent of mankind into the ground, was holding forth yesterday to the thoughtful guests of the What Cheer House, expounding his peculiar theological ideas. In the midst of the sermon a graceless scamp, named Stanlby Richard-son, emerged from one of the resorts of the iniquitous on Liedesdorff street, his sinful propensities inflamed with inferior whisky, and walking up to the preacher, with one blow he drove his stove-pipe hat down to his shoulders, thereby interwighting the discourse. The congregation marveled among themselves, and inquired what manner of man is this, while the preacher drew himself out of the hat, and without without manner of the hat, the preacher drew himself out of the hat, and without waiting to turn the other cheek any time to speak of, he raised a teavy cane which he used to point his arguments, and took after the emissary of evil at a right smart gait. The fellow made the circuit of several squares, closely pursued by the prophet, when a policeman intercepted his flight, and took him into custody. On being brought before the Police Court this morning on the charge of assault and battery, complain-ant's hat having been severely battered, the culprit admitted his guilt, and re-marked that the act was merely intended as a piece of pleasanty. He assured the as a piece of pleasantry. He assured the Court that complainant's religious doc-trines were mere moonshine, and he sup-posed that such rebukes of false prophets and the putting down of heresy was quite permissible. The Court intimated in re-ply that the religious liberty was one of the fundamental principles of the Con-

AN INQUIRING MIND .- A little semipagan, who for the first time receiving some religious instruction from a female friend whom he was visiting, found some difficulty in understanding that our Sunday had anything remarkable in it over any other day. At last, by dint of "line upon line and precept upon precept," he was made to understand somewhat of the sanctity of the day. Unfortunately however, soon after he began to under stand things, coming from church one Sunday he noticed the apothecary shops open. His newly acquired moral sense acquired a terrible shock, and he entered into a very orthodox denunciation of the "But," he was told, "the druggist must keep open on Sundays so the sick people can get medicine."

Why, do the people get sick on Sun-

"Yes, just as any other day."
"Well, good people don't die on Sunday, do they?"
"Certainly."

How can that be? Does heaven keep open on Sunday?"
It is needless to say that all further grave conversation on the subject was

A YOUTHFUL COUPLE of runaways in Texas having obtained a license repaired to a clergyman on Red River and desired to a clergyman on Red River and desired him to perform the ceremony. He, however, declined on account of their youth, and for fear the law might hold him responsible. Not to be outdone, they stowed themselves on a cottonwood log and drifted far enough out into the stream to be considered out of the State, while the obliging minister climbed on a stump at the water's edge and pronounced the words of the ceremony which made them man and wife.
